

Butler Schein Animal Health Expands Its Product Portfolio with Veterinary Instrumentation's Full Line of Surgical Instruments and Orthopedic Devices

May 24, 2013

MELVILLE, NY – May 24, 2013 – Butler Schein Animal Health, the U.S. Animal Health business of Henry Schein, Inc., today introduced the Veterinary Instrumentation line of surgical instruments and veterinary orthopedic devices as part of its product portfolio.

Veterinary Instrumentation offers a wide range of high-quality specialty products, including cruciate ligament repair systems such as the latest procedure, TTA Rapid. Working with leading veterinary surgeons Veterinary Instrumentation develops instruments and implants designed especially for veterinary surgery and dentistry.

"We are committed to offering the very best products and services to help veterinarians operate their practices efficiently and provide the highest level of quality care," said Kevin Vasquez, Chairman, President and CEO, Butler Schein Animal Health. "We are excited to now have the opportunity to bring the excellent line of Veterinary Instrumentation products to our U.S. customers."

Veterinary Instrumentation is the leading supplier of surgical instruments and implants to veterinary surgeons in the United Kingdom. The Company became part of Henry Schein's Animal Health business in 2012. Since then, Henry Schein has brought Veterinary Instrumentation's high quality specialty products to a growing number of animal health professionals across Europe, Australasia and now the United States.
